Charges Made By Mayer Against Heney Are Put in House Committee Record

The charge made by Levy Mayer, counsel for Armour & Co., in the packers' case, that Francis J. Heney, counsel for the Senate Agricultural Committee, had been charged in an official Government document drawn by Attorney General Wickesham, of complicity in "jury fixing," was made a part of the record when it was brought up in the session of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee yesterday.

When Mr. Heney appeared as a witness, Representative Dewalt greeted him with the letter which had been barred from evidence by the Senate committee. This letter, which was offered by Levy Mayer before the Senate committee to show, as he alleged, that Heney had been proved guilty of "fixing" juries, was written by former Attorney General George W. Wickesham to former President Taft in 1912. When Heney appeared to testify, Dewalt brought up the row between Heney and Mayer.

Intended to Verify Charge.
He had obtained, he said, a copy of a Government document which he thought tended to verify a charge against Heney by Mayer. The letter was then read in evidence. It is a report on an investigation of certain land fraud cases in the Far West, in which Heney acted as prosecutor. In part, it follows:

"It is charged by the defendant and his friends that William J. Burns, who was investigating jurors for Mr. Francis J. Heney, as stated by the latter in a communication to me, sent his agents throughout the several counties from which names of jurors had been taken for the purpose of filling the jury box, and had these proposed jurors investigated prior to the time the box was filled. It is claimed that these agents reported to Burns, and that he was able in some way to control, and did control, the selection of names that went into the jury box; that in this way the jury box was filled with names of persons predisposed to convict, to wit, Democrats, Populists, Socialists and Republicans belonging to what is known as the Simon faction, who were antagonistic to the so-called Mitchell faction of the Republican party, to which Jones and the persons prosecuted belonged.

"I need not go further in a recital of the high-handed and outrageous conduct on the part of officers of the prosecution in these cases. The Government cannot properly countenance nor is it expedient in these times of attacks upon courts and the judicial system of the United States, for it to lend its approval to any such procedure. In the light of these facts, as they appear from the documents and reports before the department, it does not seem to me that any person convicted of land frauds by a jury drawn from the box referred to had a fair and impartial trial."

On the strength of this letter, President Taft pardoned two men convicted of land frauds.

Dewalt and Heney in Row.
Preceding the introduction of the letter there was a battle of words between Mr. Heney and Mr. Dewalt. Mr. Dewalt had asked Mr. Heney as to his methods in summoning witnesses while acting as advocate for the Federal Trade Commission. This colloquy was as follows:

Mr. Dewalt—Now I will presume, and if I am not fair in my presumption, please say so—that you are entirely fair in summoning these witnesses and in examining them. That is correct, isn't it? That is a fair presumption?

Mr. Heney—I think that you may presume it.

Mr. Dewalt—In other words, you would not stoop to use any methods, either by threat, intimidation or tampering, to have a witness color his testimony or to do anything which might influence him in giving such testimony. That is a fair presumption, isn't it?

Mr. Heney—I think it is.

Mr. Dewalt—In other words, you would not use the methods which George W. Wickesham, Attorney General of the United States, says were used in the celebrated case of United States vs. Willard N. Jones?

Fighting Behind Barricade in Berlin Street

A remarkable picture made during the recent heavy fighting in Berlin. The photo shows government troops—note one is in civilian clothes—fighting from behind a barricade hurriedly thrown up in a Berlin street.

Mr. Heney—Did he say they were used by me?

Mr. Dewalt—He says this—

Mr. Heney—Pardon me, but did he say they were used by me?

Mr. Dewalt—Well, let me finish.

Mr. Heney—Well, I have asked you a question.

Mr. Dewalt—Well, I will answer it. He says this, in his report, and I have the original report right here—

Mr. Heney—Do you think that is fair?

Mr. Dewalt—Wait a minute—

Mr. Heney—Do you think that is a fair proposition?

Mr. Dewalt—You asked me what he said, and I will answer that.

Mr. Heney—No I didn't. I asked you if he laid it to me.

Mr. Dewalt—I will give you just what he says.

Mr. Heney—I asked you if he laid it to me.

Mr. Dewalt—Here I read extracts from the letter of Attorney General Wickesham in which he discussed the methods used in the case referred to, part of which letter is reproduced above.

Heney Denies the Charges.
Following the reading of the letter, Mr. Dewalt said: "In this report, which I want to introduce in the record, Mr. Heney, as you have had the privilege of introducing many of your matters, the Attorney General. If I am correct, states that on several different occasions you were cognizant of this matter; that you filed a brief covering some seventy-seven pages, but that your reply was not satisfactory either to the Department's agent or the attorney, Mr. Finch, who had authority in the matter. I ask you again, did you pursue in this investigation the methods it is alleged you pursued in the investigation of Willard N. Jones?"

Mr. Heney—No; and not in that investigation either.

Mr. Dewalt—The record is made up against you; I do not know whether you did or not.

Mr. Heney—All right; it is an ex parte record. Now, I would like to ask: What is your motive in bringing this in here?

Mr. Dewalt—My object is merely to show what the public record contains. You have accused me of partiality.

Mr. Heney—And if you want to prove impartiality on my part, I think you have.

Mr. Dewalt—How is that?

Mr. Heney—And if you want to prove prejudice on your part in regard to me, I think you have done that, too.

Mr. Dewalt—No. Prior to this meeting this morning, I paid you a very high compliment, my dear sir, by saying I thought your testimony was very illuminating.

Mr. Heney—All right. But you did not compliment me this morning when you insinuated that you did not believe me and did believe Levy Mayer.

Mr. Dewalt—I want to say in this record now that I do not believe you, would not believe you.

Mr. Heney—Well, we are quits then, because I wouldn't believe you either.

At the conclusion of the colloquy, the entire text of the letter from Attorney General Wickesham to President Taft was made a part of the record.

GERMANY SEEKS LOAN HERE.
GENEVA, Feb. 14.—The Lausanne Gazette says Germany is preparing to raise a large loan in the United States as soon as peace is signed. The dispatch adds that the money is to be used to pay for expected raw materials from allied countries.

IT IS MOST WORTHY OF
NOTE that in spite of the martial atmosphere about Paris there is the most amazing lack of anything that pertains to the military in French fashions. There is not a suggestion of uniform among them, rather they are exquisitely and adorably frivolous and feminine, and to make up for the privations of war-time days and war-time economies the new fashions tend to extreme and extravagancies. Rich fabrics and lovely faces are in great demand, and the promise is that by summer days our lace frocks will be fluttering with ribbons.

EVEN ORGANDY FROCKS
WILL GO IN FOR FRIVOLITY, and instead of confining themselves to one color, they will combine several shades. Can you imagine anything more frivolously pretty than an orchid-tinted organdie over a slip of pink organdie, with the girdle formed of inch-wide ribbons of these two shades, and perhaps another ribbon of vivid turquoise? For a garden-party frock what a picture! If worn with a floppy hat of pink, simply trimmed with a wreath of lilacs held by knots of turquoise ribbon! Genuine Swiss organdies are now priced at $1.00 a yard on the Second floor, G street.

THEY'VE COME WITH THE
PUSSY-WILLOW and the Jonquil—these new Vases of plain mat green pottery, in all sizes and a pleasing assortment of shapes. Tall ones to hold sprays of Pussy-willow and Forsythia, shorter ones for Jonquils, the quaint little "squatty" shapes to hold big purple violets. Prices run from 20 cents to $1.00. And there are also fernieres, from 25 cents to $1.25; fernieres, from 30 cents, and shallow bowls to hold bulbs or fitted with holders for sprays of blossoms, for 75 cents and $1.00, on the Fifth floor, F street.

EVERY BIT OF A GRAPE
FRUIT IS GOOD, for at breakfast there is nothing more appetizing than this luscious golden fruit, daintily served on a clear Colonial glass dish, like you will find here for 30 cents each, or $3.50 a dozen. Then when you make marmalade from the rind and a bit of the pulp you will want a pretty jar to serve it from. Have you seen the cunning new jars with light floral cut patterns, close-fitting tops, and glass spoons, that cost but $1.50 and $1.95? If you crystallize the rind, of course it makes a good confection, but it will taste much better if you serve it from a gold-rimmed glass dish, like the ones that you will find in a number of styles on the Fifth floor, F street.

TO CUT A GRAPE-FRUIT
OR TO CARVE A FOWL you need the proper kind of knife. The kind for grape-fruit has a curved point that deftly lifts up the meaty sections, and it is made of a metal that does not stain from the fruit acid (less scouring for busy housewives). The price is 50 cents. The average small family seldom needs a big carving knife, and the small sets called "Bird Carvers" are most convenient for general use. They come in many styles, with handles of wood or bone, priced from $2.00 up, and many a welcome wedding present has been one of these sets. For general kitchen use there is a new knife that has an aluminum handle, which means a "Universal" knife, which means that it is a good one for 85 cents, on the Fifth floor, center.

REALLY, THEY ARE AS
DAINTY AS SWEET-PEAS—These Petticoats of white and flesh-colored crepe de chine and satin, with wee pink ribbon roses peeping out from among their lace frills. Some of them are trimmed quite to the knees and others have double frills of Georgette, so that while they add no bulkiness about the ankles, they give just that lovely suggestion of lace-loveliness that one loves at the bottom of a skirt. One most serviceable skirt was accordeon pleated from the hip yoke, and ended in deep points outlined by a narrow lace which was also inset at intervals all up the skirt. Even the lace-trimmed frills on the satin skirts have the under frill of the Georgette, or of a piquet satin. There is a long case filled with these beauties which will delight the heart of every beauty-loving woman. The skirts are priced from $6.00 to $18.00 on the Third floor, F street.

ALREADY SPRING BUTTERFLIES
ARE FLUTTERING across some lovely new Japanese china, and their gorgeously colored wings are outlined on a surface of white china that has a broad band of deep cream edged with a hair line of gold. Many of the pieces have mat gold handles, and the shapes are interestingly and artistically new and different. For instance, there is a square bowl of a size most needed by a small family, and there are those convenient handled dishes that have two or three compartments to hold as many different things.

Did YOU Save That Dollar On Your Sunday Dinner?

An ordinary dinner on the last Sunday in January cost a dollar less than it did the Sunday before, according to one market expert, who is showing how the tide of food prices, so long at the flood is beginning to turn. The Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger considers the "dis-solution of the league of rations" to be in sight when "eggs have begun the Humpty-Dumpty act; butter charges are in a melting mood," and "meat bills are facing a decline." The drop may not be any "shocking, joyous surprise," but the Boston Globe is certain that "gradually it will wiggle its way down to the things we buy at the corner store."
